i... my return home !

Yes, I'm back home in the UK after a very productive and enjoyable six weeks in Andalusia. I love being a "digital nomad" being able to pack up my laptop and work anywhere in the world for a short time. Whilst I was away I had fun with my house guests and day visitors, including family, ex-colleagues and friends and even one of my students who was in Spain on a half-term cycling holiday in Ronda (after the floods!) with his parents. Johnny and his mum, Sarah, came for a day at the beach with me.

I love zebras: this is in the Parque de la Paloma in Benalmádena

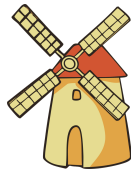

Enfoque cultural

I am a huge fan of dance and ballet is my favourite art form. This month I was lucky enough to see the Birmingham Royal Ballet's production of Don Quixote at the Lowry Theatre in Salford.

I'd originally booked to see it with my sister as a Christmas present a few years ago but it was cancelled due to Covid. I'm so happy to have finally seen this wonderful joyous ballet, full of Spanish charm!

Para ver y leer

This is my copy of Don Quijote de la Mancha, written by Miguel de Cervantes (a contemporary of William Shakespeare) in 1605 and 1615: it's over 600 pages long and in perfect condition; I haven't actually read it!!

I have visited his place of birth in Alcalá de Henares and seen lots of interesting homages to the writer and his work on my travels around Spain.
